The workshop format, moving from one poster to another works well. It stimulates interaction between presentors and attendees. All the presenters were good but Jason Hill is the most polished. I found it easier to follow him ~~and~~ and to think of questions to ~~Asks~~ Ask him.

My biggest concern is justice. A lower class community has been exposed to dangerous toxins for decades. What I see is Montrose Chemicals destroying the health of generations of low-income families who lack the intelligence ~~to~~ & knowledge to understand the dire situation we have lived in. How are these people going to recieve justice from the crime of contaminating an entire community? its taken years to finally begin the removal process, to which I have no complaints. My concern lies w/ the people who have suffered in this impoverished community & the familes who throughout several generations have suffered ailments relating directly to D.D.T. contamination. this reminds me of 1947. Streets, parks, & homes sprayed down by ddt.

trucks. Men who lied making the accusation "D.D.T. is safe enough to eat" as he himself eats the toxic chemical, lies of contaminers like lead, for example ment to protect the suppliers. What I seek is justice for a community facing enough struggles without the added poison they are facing.
I have played as a child in the field full of D.D.T. What will the E.P.A. do to find me justice?
