Good Afternoon Tom,

I just received an email from the Journal of Occupational and Environmental Medicine. They are giving "open access" to my Letter to the Editor in regards to Relative Source Contributions of Goitrogens. You can read the email train below between myself and the journal staff.

Subject: Letter to the Editor - JOEM

Ms. Spraycar,

Last year I submitted a "Letter to the Editor" of the Journal of Occupational and Environmental Medicine (JOM201214 - "Relative Source Contribution of Perchlorate and Other Goitrogens and Thyroid Function") which was published. Currently the United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) has a special Science Advisory Board conducting hearings and research on “Approaches for Deriving Maximum Contaminant Level Goals for Drinking Water” for perchlorate. They would very much like to give out copies my letter to the Board members and post the document on their webpage as part of the public record. However, they do not feel that they can do that without permission from the Journal. For the purposes of the Science Advisory Board, how might this problem be resolved? Any assistance that you can offer would be helpful.
