

To: SAB@EPA

Date: 03/09/2011 02:51 PM

Subject:

There are several areas that policies of yours that are un-clear and it is not fair to the people whom these laws and policies effect, because many are unaware as to what is to come out of many of these laws. Hydraulic fracturing is necessary but there are several cons as well, but there must be something done about flowback, and the waste contained in it. Often times many do not know what is contained in most flowback, but there are several chemicals contained it. Considering that the Epa admits that some chemicals from flowback enter the water after unfiltered fracking, it should go without saying that something must be done to regulate this problem. The safe drinking act is a good start, but you must do more to reinforce it. I hope you address the issues I have tried to bring to your attention. That is all.

Jordan Sebastian

Roll Tide